Featuring silhouettes of untold purity and supreme smoothness, the six pieces comprising the Pilotis Collection by Puiforcat stand out for a disciplined design that strikes a compelling contrast with the frolicking air and light all around them. They add soul and brilliance to any table they grace.

Designed for Puiforcat by Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby, the British duo who have been exploring pure forms for nearly 30 years, this collection is boldly architectural in spirit. The two artists sought their muse in the modernist movement, to create these three candlesticks and three candelabras of various heights and lengths.

The artistry of Jean Puiforcat, the silversmith-cum-designer who gave the Maison its Art Deco identity, also resonates with Barber and Osgerby's creative vision: the spherical teapots, polyhedral coffee decanters or conical vases he designed during the inter-war period display the same refined concept of tableware as can be seen in the Pilotis Collection.
